Students glimpse into Lemon Grove's future

by Marilyn Phenow

The General Plan Advisory Committee, which is officially responsible for mapping the future of Lemon Grove, may find itself without the job.

Alan Cook's fifth-grade class at Golden Elementary School has not only studied the blocks located within the city, but has constructed a whole new city out of cardboard building blocks. It's their vision of the future Lemon Grove.

They have worked diligently for the last month assembling paste, cardboard boxes, construction paper, straws, and anything else their creative minds could think of in order to create an urban masterpiece. The children even added splashes of paint to their miniature metropolis.

What began as a lesson in math ratios two months ago evolved into a six week lesson on city building, or more specifically, Lemon Grove.

"I took some aerial shots of the city, and then the kids and I started constructing a huge map incorporating parcels of land, and other assets that the photos outlined," Cook said. "I thought it would be great for the kids to create a map of Lemon Grove, mark their individual homes and measure in ratio the distance from their homes to other places in the city like a best friend's home, that kind of thing. They could learn the lesson and at the same time get a sense for their community."

The map was only the beginning. Cook and his students took on a much more ambitious project — the construction of a miniature city of the future.

It was by word of mouth that the consultant to the General Plan Advisory Committee for the city, Lettieri-McIntyre and Associates heard what the kids were doing and came out to view for themselves the students' work.

"We started talking to them about what were the essential things to have in order to build a city," said Lettieri. "(We told them about) needs like streets, commercial, industrial, and residential zones. The kids were divided into groups and the imagination for their city flowed."

Before they started the actual construction, Lettieri and Cook instructed the kids to take a walk around the city with their parents and take a closer look at what Lemon Grove currently has to offer residents and where the buildings are located.

After the field trip with mom and dad, the students came back to their desks with their supplies and a lot of imagination, began creating their masterpieces.

"I'm making the mayor's house," said nine-year-old Cheryl Revere.

"It's going to have a huge room for him to store all his important papers, and it's going to have the largest swimming pool so he can relax when he comes home from a hard day's work."

Ten-year-old student body president Nick Bonnell won hands down for the most ingenious contribution of all. An elevator fashioned to go up and down on the side of his newly constructed "House of Blues."

"It's got a See's Candy factory to provide jobs for the people, and it has a Bookstar which is something that Lemon Grove has yet to have. It has offices, too."

Members of the General Plan committee take note, 11-year-old Wes Minor envisions a shopping mall similar to that of the Lemon Grove Plaza, but with a special addition, to be named after himself.

Minor Mall has a Mervyn's, a nursery, an AM/PM market, a six-screen entertainment theatre playing such notable features as "Major Pain," and "Demon Night." For a snack after the movie, the golden arches of McDonald's are located conveniently right behind the theater. (The only place to buy food in their city at the moment).

"We don't have a theatre here in Lemon Grove," said Bonnell and Minor. Our moms and dads have to drive us all the way over to the Grove. Same goes for a shopping plaza, we drive all the way to Parkway (Plaza). It's a pain."

Along with industrial and commercial zones, came residential buildings. Fifth-grader Josh Ammann followed his buddy Minor's train of thought in naming his two-story apartments after himself.

Other group leaders, including Michael Shotton, constructed a hospital, church, city hall, day-care center, schools, recreation center, and even the famous yellow lemon.

With the help of Lettieri and the city planning department, a grid was outlined and Lettieri and the students planned their future downtown along both sides of the existing trolley tracks. Placed

Old time parade

Early morning rain didn't dampen the spirits of the hundreds of parade-watchers at last week's Old Time Days Parade. The streets were dry by 11 o'clock and most of the parade contingents marched out right on time.

New system will help locate Alzheimer's patients

by Marilyn Phenow

When Santa Barbara tourist Susan Anderson visited San Diego last year, she returned home safely, but her 70-year-old father, stricken with Alzheimer's disease, didn't do as well.

Four days after wandering off from his companions at Sea World and reported missing he was found dead at the mouth of Tecolote Canyon.

"We're all here today to make sure that a tragedy like this never happens again," said District Attorney Paul Pfingst last week while announcing the start of the Alzheimer's Safe Return Program. "It's up to all of us as a community to assist these lost victims and help return them safely home to their families, the place where they belong."

More than 200 law enforcement officials, hospital administrators, senior patrol volunteers, and media representatives attended the kick-off program.

The program features a 24-hour community response team made-up of designated area coordinators who will network between law enforcement agencies, hospitals, transit and media. The volunteers will also provide support to the caregiver of the memory-impaired lost person while the search continues.

In 1993, the Alzheimer's Association and U.S. Department of Justice established an identification system for lost Alzheimer's patients. Alzheimer's patients are registered into a computer system tied into the the National Crime Information Center. The registration number is engraved on an ID bracelet along with a 1-800 number. Once the number is called, the registration ID number verifies who the missing person is as well as the location of the caregiver.

However, only 135 Alzheimer's patients are officially registered under this national program out of 40,000 patients. And it is the guaranteed safe return of the registered and unregistered that the restructured 24-hour program aims to achieve.

"We'd find a wandering Alzheimer's patient without an ID, and would have to sit and wait, and be at the mercy of the caregiver to call us once they were alerted they were missing the loved one," said Lenice Lopez, spokesperson for the Lemon Grove Sheriff Department. "But under this new networking system we can get to work right away even if they don't have an ID on them."

The new system divides San Diego into five segments with volunteer area leaders participating in a 24-hour community response team. Retired Senior Volunteer Patrols attached to San Diego-area law enforcement agencies will participate.

"These volunteers will fax photos of the missing person to other agencies locally and out of state, or prepare a BOTL report (Be on the Lookout) physical description to the various local networking agencies such as the hospitals, and area agencies on aging. We can find out if there have at least been any sightings of this person anywhere," said Lopez.

Each senior volunteer patrol designated coordinator in the various regions will go through a three week period of training on the networking procedure and care education of Alzheimer's afflicted.

In the East County, enforcement agencies are beginning their training of volunteers.

"It's a great program," said Bob Moreau, acting chief of police for El Cajon Police Department. "As police officers, we try to take care of everything, but sometimes there isn't time to do all you want to do," said Moreau. Now we'll have our volunteers on it, saving lives by helping to provide a safe return home."

Moreau said that this Tuesday, law enforcement officials from the police and sheriff agencies of East County got together to discuss a combined training for all of the East County senior volunteers in El Cajon. "Right now they train at their respected cities, but we thought the combined training would save on cost, and would give the volunteers a chance to train and work together which would surely help them in the networking safe return program," said Moreau.

Time is of the essence when it comes to locating a lost disoriented loved one. No one knows better than that than Anderson herself. She and her family had come for a visit to San Diego last year to see her father, a victim of Alzheimer. The group decided to visit Sea World for the day. The father went in to use the restroom and according to the caregiver, was never seen leaving the facility.

"Within hours, we had contacted the association, the law enforcement authorities, hospitals, you name it, we called them all," said Anderson.

FRIENDS OF THE LIBRARY WILL MEET MAY 25, at 9 a.m., IN THE COMMUNITY ROOM

Next meetin of the Friends of the Lemon Grove Library will be at 9 a.m. May 25 in the community room of the library. Knock on the glass doors for admission; the library does not officially open until 10 a.m.

AT THE APRIL MEETING

Our meeting opened and then took an immediate intermission while we joined staff in honoring Barbara Alvarez on her tenth year anniversary as a county library staff member. Sonya Heiserman, branch librarian, read a proclamation from the county which, even in formal, government language, recognized Barbara's calm, pleasant personality and compatibility with the public she serves. To Barbara, we are friends and people, not a faceless "public".

We talked about summer reading for Lemon Grove's children, one of the library programs for which we provide financial backing. We have voted to provide funds for programs to be offered in this summer's "Paws to Read", featuring storytimes and programs about working dogs. We will again supply the awards at end of summer for those children who have read ten books or more.

Rosemary Putnam, now a member of the board of the Board of Directors of the Lemon Grove Chamber of Commerce, reported on a program presented there by EDCO Disposal, the company holding the trash disposal contract in Lemon Grove. She brought brochures describing money-saving options for residents who qualify and also announced that the company would welcome the public for tours of their facility, which includes recycling, trans-formation of garden trash to mulch, and instructions on how to compost for yourself. If asked, EDCO will present programs regarding their operation and answer questions from the public at community meetings.

Rosemary Putnam reported on a recent meeting of representatives of East County Library Friends groups with Dianne Jacob, who is the County Supervisor representing our area. Ms. Jacob has asked the library groups to meet with her quarterly and at those meetings hears what problems may have arisen and what help we may need; the meetings also provide a way to exchange information and to share successes. Our next meeting with County Supervisor Dianne Jacob will take place at the Santee branch library instead of county offices so that we may see what the Friends group there has done in putting together their own book store. Anyone who would like to attend that meeting is welcome; check with Rosemary Putnam, who will be notified of the date.

Helen Ofield and Dona Clabby, both Friends and both serving on the General Plan Advisory Committee (GPAC) to update Lemon Grove's master plan, thanked the Friends of the Lemon Grove Library, Inc., for our March letter setting forth recommendations for an improved community. As Helen pointed out, we in Lemon Grove are living in one of the area's few remaining well-defined small communities. We can have the benefits of our village, the neighborliness, participation in town government, SUPPORT AND IMPROVEMENT OF OUR LIBRARY, the kinds of amenities we want here. At the same time, outside our borders, we can take advantage of the urban landscape (a nicer word than sprawl) that surrounds us. Both Helen and Dona encouraged Friends as well as the rest of the community to continue participation in forming the master plan that will map Lemon Grove's future. Talk to them at Friends' meetings if you don't see them around town. Think about how our library should be, how the community could be.

We had a letter of thanks from Frank Haag of the Probation Department. After our March booksale, he picked up a load of books and with the help of Tom and Dona Clabby transported them to Rancho del Campo and the Girls' Rehab Center, where they have been the start of fulfillment of his dream of libraries for the young people at those facilities. We have invited him to return at the end of our May 13 book sale.

Although we had a good time when we had a book-selling booth at Chollas Lake's Country Fair last year, we have opted not to accept their invitation to return on June 3 this year. We will still be recovering from our own Old Time Days event.

Our sign-up lists, assignments, plans, schedules, circulated the table as we prepared the logistics of transferring hundreds of books to the Old Time Days site for our book sale. We told again the story of The Year the Automatic Sprinklers Went On, when we had prepared for dew, or even rain, as we covered our books and left overnight. Who knew that the automatic sprinklers would spring on from below? The stalwart rescuers of Lemon Grove rushed in to save our books, and we laugh each year, remembering.

IT IS A BIG, BIG BOOK STANDING ALONE AND UNABRIDGED ON ITS WOODEN DAIS

The Webster's Third New International Dictionary, Unabridged, which rests on the tall table behind the reference librarian's desk, is a crisp, new, up-to-date reference book. At 2,662 closely packed pages, it must have words we haven't even used yet. Ruth Dunlap provided the funds to purchase this replacement of our former dog-eared, old, reference dictionary. We all thank her, but probably a special thanks comes from our students, whose reports should now show increased erudition. There is a book plate affixed on the inside cover of the dictionary, recognizing Mrs. Dunlap as the donor.

GOOSEBUMPS" SERIES SOUGHT, ESPECIALLY BOOKS BY R. L. STINE

Children love the "Goosebumps" series of books, particularly those written by R. L. Stine. Our library can't keep them on the shelves; they are snatched up and checked out immediately. If you have these books and can donate them, our library will be very grateful. Paperbacks need to be in good condition; they will receive hard use once they are in circulation.

GRANDPARENTS WHO READ TO CHILDREN START PREPARATION; CLASS ON JUNE 8

Called the Grandparents and Books program by the library, it is really an informal coming together of adults who love both books and children and children who love to hear books read to them.

Sonya Heiserman, Lemon Grove librarian, is ready to welcome a new group of readers to supplement the "regulars", Annette Quintana, Doris Townsend, Lois Heiserman, Mary Vinson. The new group will meet June 8 and June 15, 9:00 - 11:00 a.m. to learn a few skills, and to get acquainted with "behind the scenes" procedures at the library. Readers commit themselves to at least an hour of reading per week. Please call Sonya, 463-9819, to sign up or to have questions answered.

Readers select books they intend to read, but are prepared to shift to others at a moment's notice, depending upon the ages and interests of the children who appear at the scheduled time. A selection of new books is supplied by the library for use by grandparent readers, who usually welcome one to four children during the course of an hour.

The children, usually ages 3 - 7, are very accepting of whatever style of reading or storytelling the grandparent reader may present, and readers meet some very nice children and parents.

QUICK REVIEWS OF RECENT BOOKS AND MAGAZINES

by Mary Vinson, Annie Quintana, Ron Day, Margrette Carr

"Balboa Firefly" by Jack Trolley

This novel of mayhem in the park is more than just another plea to relocate Lindbergh Field to a safer site, preferably Naval Air Station, Miramar. (Careful, Jack; your agenda is showing.) It is also interesting characters pushing an exciting plot in a great setting, namely our own San Diego. San Diego Police Department Sergeant Tommy Donahoo and his crack team of homicide dicks have their work cut out for them in preventing not one, but two, madmen from shooting down a 747 on its approach to Lindbergh. Pilots will find the climactic scene implausible, if not downright silly, but even readers unwilling to suspend disbelief will enjoy a jolly good yarn about the old hometown. MC

"She Walks These Hills" by Sharyn McCrumb

A college professor, a convict, the spirit of a woman kidnapped by the Shawnee two hundred years ago, all travel the Appalachian trail, separately, for different reasons and in these present times. Their stories hold surprises and the plot moves along, beautifully written throughout.

The professor is obsessed by the story of Katie Wyler, who escaped from the Shawnee in 1779 and braved two hundred miles of wilderness, alone and starving, to find her way home. His tenderfoot attempt to follow her route leads him to encounters with presentday mountain people as well as with a convicted murderer, whose mind has slipped during twenty-five years spent in prison. Although there are murders to be solved and mysteries that need unlocking, the stories of these people and their quests are what will keep you engrossed.

The author lives in the Virginia Blue Ridge, less than a hundred miles from where her family settled in 1790. She writes of the Appalachian Mountains and the people who make their homes there with knowledge and affection, and she is an accomplished storyteller. MV

"The Overworked American: The Unexpected Decline of Leisure" by Juliet B. Schor

Americans today are working harder, longer, and producing more than ever before; we are acquiring more goods even as we leave less time to enjoy our possessions and each other. We are more stressed out and our children seldom see us. What happened? How is it we can be so well off in a material sense and still not feel we have improved the quality of our lives? Juliet Schor carefully documents the decline of leisure in American life and examines in detail the insidious features of our culture which strap us on to a work and spend treadmill and place a higher value on money than on time.

Ms. Schor does a masterful job of defining the problem by holding up a mirror for us to see ourselves. I believe, however, that the situation, while critical, is not the crisis she seems to think it is. Read this book for her research and decide on your own solutions. We can step off the treadmill of modern life on our own; the government interventions suggested by Ms. Schor could make the situation worse. MC

"Divided We Fall: Gambling with History in the Nineties" by Haynes Johnson

Haynes Johnson is a familiar participant on the weekly program, "Washington Week in Review". This book is similar to that program inasmuch as it is written from the viewpoint of a reporter or commentator rather than an advocate of any particular policy or agenda. In preparation for this book, Johnson interviewed many people from different walks of life about the major concerns they have regarding jobs, crime, welfare, race, schools, immigration, leadership, etc. He also reports on how our government responds or does not respond to these concerns of people and sometimes even creates the problems.

This book is a thoughtful account of the challenging problems facing our country in the decade of the nineties, such as:

The shrinking of the middle class.

The widening gap between the haves and have-nots.

The growing conflict between the haves and have-nots.

A multicultural culturalism that often divides rather than unites.

An increase in uncivil behavior (racial insults, rudeness, hate crimes, etc.)

An unwillingness to sit down and talk together collectively to solve problems.

The fear of losing control of our lives.

The lack of confidence in banks, schools, big business, organized labor, organized religion, Congress, the Supreme Court, the judicial system, political parties, the media, the health care system, the government, etc.

Politicians who believe if they tell the truth they will not be elected.

Our willingness to isolate ourselves in suburban enclaves where the middle class escapes paying taxes for the impoverished inner cities.

Our lack of understanding of our Constitution and how our government works.

Our tendency to make decisions about issues without taking time to become properly informed about the subjects.

Our political leaders' increased reliance on polls to shape their positions on issues.

Johnson asks whether we can work together to solve our problems in the nineties, or are they beyond our capacity to solve? RD

"Black Cross" by Greg Iles

An historical, spellbinding, suspense-filled thriller that keeps one's interest even when the mind would rather not deal with the subject matter. The story starts slowly, with the death of an old man and the grief of a grandson who is left to make sense of a few pieces of World War II memorabilia and the stories of an elderly rabbi who claims to have been his grandfather's friend and confidante.

Senate should confirm Foster

by John W. Johnson, San Diego Urban League

The San Diego Urban League strongly endorses the nomination of Dr. Henry W. Foster, Jr. for U.S. Surgeon General and hopes that he will be confirmed by the Senate with dispatch.

What is at issue in Dr. Foster's nomination - qualifications or politics?

Dr. Foster has delivered thousands of babies, and developed a widely regarded effort to reduce teenage pregnancy in Nashville.

He is credited with establishing a much-needed program for teenagers in the public housing projects in Nashville designed to build self-esteem and encourage abstinence and personal responsibility.

Health experts from around the country have watched and copied Dr. Foster's teenage pregnancy program. It has served as a guide and an inspiration to many projects across the nation's cities, such as the San Diego Urban League's Project ENABLs (Educating Now and Babies Later), which is recognized throughout the state of California, nationally and internationally as a model abstinence program.

Dr. Foster's program was recognized by President George Bush in 1991 as part of the "Thousand Points of Light" and was nominated as an exemplary program by the Tennessee state legislature.

Opposition to the doctor from Tennessee for Surgeon General appears to be motivated basically by partisan politics and the abortion issue. There is even talk that Dr. Foster's nomination may never be brought before the full Senate.

This would deny Dr. Foster the opportunity to be judged by the U.S. Senate. Dr. Foster is a distinguished physician who deserves to be treated with dignity and not like a political football in the emerging politics of this season.

The nation has pressing health needs - many of them are in our urban centers. These types of problems involve poverty, teenage pregnancy and high infant mortality. Dr. Foster's track record on these critical issues is clearly impressive.

Let the Senate confirm him with dispatch so the nation can get on with addressing these pressing health issues.

Future city

along an imaginary Third Avenue were commercial buildings interspersed with residential apartments and condos with an industrial zone located on the other side of town.

Across from that are single-family homes.

Lettieri instructed the fifth-graders on the planning of cities much like he has instructed the existing General Plan Advisory Committee.

"When planning your community, you should know your resources, and protect the most precious resource - the people of the community. You don't want to place residential homes in areas that are noisy or where there might be a lot of crime, and yet you want the apartments near the trolley so the people have easy access to it. Convenience."

In addition to constructing the city, the students have been writing short essays about what they like about living in Lemon Grove.

"This has been a great experience for the kids," said Cook. "It's been a number of lessons in language arts, math and social studies incorporated together. But most important of all, it's taught the kids to have a sense of involvement and pride in their community. After all, they are our caretakers of the future of Lemon Grove."

And according to Cook, many of the children remain in Lemon Grove, raising their own families here.

"I've got about 25 students who are the children of parents

He said that their city planning was much like his work with the city's General Plan Advisory Committee.

who attended school here," Cook said. "If that's not proof, I don't know what is."

Homework assignments are also a contributing source to the city project. However, homework isn't just going home for the kids to do.

"We thought this would be an excellent way to get the adults involved in what's currently going on with the General Plan update," said Lettieri. "Up to this point, we have the town hall survey, the general plan mail-in survey and suggestions from our future young residents. But we also want to hear from their parents. Some of the homework assignments are designed to get the kids to ask their parents what their likes and dislikes are about the city, and how they would change things."

A June 6 play is planned that also examines the sense of community pride and spirit and what constitutes a great city.

"For myself and my associates, this has been an eye-opening experience for all of us," said Lettieri. "We told them to construct the commercial, residential and industrial buildings, but we didn't tell them exactly which buildings to construct."

"They went out there and took a hard look at the community, and perceived what was needed and wanted. There sharpness and keenness leaves me astounded."

At the end of the school year, the miniature grid city will be donated to the kindergartners for play, and the aerial map resembling a Monopoly board with houses flagged with students names, will be donated to the school as a gift.

The children hope to display their "vision of the city" some-

Things To Do!

Plimpton to perform in Lemon Grove

San Diego's civic organist Robert Plimpton and baritone Ronald M. Banks will perform in a joint concert at 7 p.m. Sunday at Lemon Grove Lutheran Church, the corner of Skyline Drive and Alton Street.

This third in the church's Community Concert Series showcasing the church's new Rodger's 835 digital organ. Admission is free; free child care will also be provided.

Plimpton plays weekly Sunday concerts on the world-famous Spreckels organ in Balboa Park and serves as artistic director for the Spreckels Organ Society and organist of Christ Church Unity in San Diego.

Born in Pennsylvania, Plimpton is a graduate of Eastern College, St. David's, Pennsylvania, and a protégé of famous composer and organ virtuoso Robert Elmore. His career has included being resident organist of the First Presbyterian Church of San Diego and performing with the Philadelphia Orchestra, San Diego Symphony and the San Diego Chamber Orchestra.

He was influential in founding the Spreckels Organ Society, which has greatly increased the use and appreciation of San Diego's unique and historic outdoor organ. Over 12,000 world-wide members attest to his dedicated work on behalf of the organ.

Familiar selections by Bach, Fauré and Guilman plus contemporary works by Travis, Clarke, Mexican composer Ramon Noble and the Nigerian composer Fela Sowande are his choices for performance.

Baritone Ronald Banks was seen most recently as Don Magnifico in the San Diego Opera Ensemble production of "La Cenerentola." He has appeared with the San Diego Opera in mainstage productions of "La Bohème," "Macbeth" and "Rigoletto." Other roles include the Pirate King in "The Pirates of Penzance" with San Diego Comic Opera and the male lead in "Side by Side" by Sondheim at the Theatre in Old Town.

Rev. E.J. Volkmann, pastor of Lemon Grove Lutheran, said his church hopes to extend its music ministry into the community at no cost so that people can hear good music and develop this part of their being.

"We all know that here is more to life than work, money and daily activities," Volkmann said. "It is music - in particular - that speaks to the finest in us and spurs us on to heights that we never dreamed were possible for Man."

National dance companies coming to Theatre East

Alice in Wonderland

The California Ballet company will present the San Diego premiere of Charles Bennett's "Alice In Wonderland," this weekend at Theatre East in El Cajon.

Based on Lewis Carroll's "Alice in Wonderland, Through the Looking Glass," this children's classic will be presented as a complete one-act version.

This ballet has been performed extensively throughout the Northwest and has received excellent reviews in Seattle and Tacoma, Wa. Performances are scheduled for 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday and 2:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

"Alice in Wonderland" is the first in the series of works based on children's stories.

Company Ballerinas Denise Dabrowski and Sylvia Poolos will dance the lead role of Alice. New company principal Max Cherneshv will dance the White Rabbit, Manuel Alcantara will be the Mad Hatter, Yvonne Montelius the March Hare and Nanelle Newbom the Red Queen.

The scenery will be infused with exciting multimedia effects and slide projections. Sets and costumes are being made locally.

Choreographer Charles Bennett has been the associate director of the California Ballet since 1983. He is a former principal dancer with the American Ballet Theatre and New York City Ballet.

Ticket prices range from $18.50 to $28. Student tickets are available as well as discounts for seniors, military and groups.

The Tamburitans

After a sell-out performance last year, the Duquesne University Tamburitans return to San Diego to delight their new-found audience with the colorful folklore and traditions of Eastern Europe.

The Tamburitans, an ensemble of 38 singers, dancers, and instrumentalists, continues in its 58th year to preserve and perpetuate the cultural heritage of Eastern Europe. The performance is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. May 26.

This year's program will include the full company performing two Croatian folk melodies; a sparkling variety of music and dance from Hungary, Serbia, Bulgaria, Romania, Moldova, Russia, Greece and Poland, ending with an exuberant, acrobatic "Hopaki!" from the Ukraine.

Tickets are $10 and $12 and may be ordered by calling 440-2277.

Dixieland fest to feature locals

There will be a strong local flavor at the second annual Del Mar Dixieland Jazz Festival this weekend at the Del Mar Fairgrounds.

The three-day festival will feature 24 dixieland acts, nine of which hail from San Diego County. The area contingent includes Chicago Six, Tami Thomas' Swing-n-Dixie, High Society, Frisco Syncopators, South Market Street Jazz Band, Dixie Hasslers, Mission Bay High School Jazz Band, Red Shade and Charlie Clark. The line-up includes a mix of dixieland, ragtime and traditional jazz music. For more information, call 792-4252.

Grant charming, but 'Englishman' too thin for big screen

by Betty Jo Tucker

British actor Hugh Grant, fresh from his smashing success in "Four Weddings And A Funeral," delights movie audiences again with his special brand of nervous charm in "The Englishman Who Went Up A Hill And Came Down A Mountain."

Sadly, most of the rest of this Miramax movie, written and directed by Welsh-born Christopher Monger, fails to match Grant's highly watchable performance.

Based on a true story, the plot centers on efforts in 1917 by townspeople of Ffynnon Garw, Wales, to make sure their local "peak" gets designated as a mountain by British cartographers Anson (Grant) and Garrad (Ian McNeice). However, a mountain must measure at least 1,000 feet, and Ffynnon Garw stacks up at only 984.

In one very funny scene, a reluctant and uncomfortable Grant tries to placate the villagers by telling them "this situation should not take away the beauty and affection you feel for your little hill."

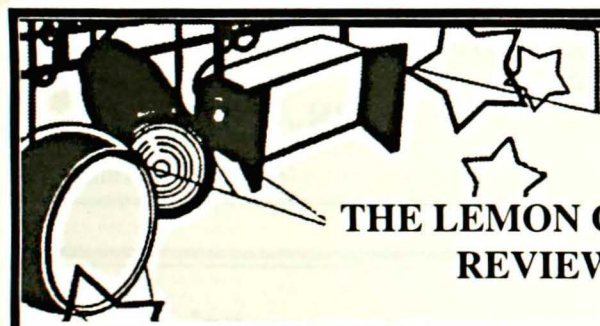

Undaunted, the townsfolk decide to build the remaining feet needed before Anson and Garrad leave town. Led by local mischief-maker Morgan the Goat (Colm Meany) and the town minister (Kenneth Griffith), the entire town engages in ridiculous subterfuge to keep the British surveyors from returning to England before Ffynnon Garw "grows" to its proper height.

Morgan even arranges a romance for Anson with Betty of Cardiff, played by the vivacious Tara Fitzgerald, who generates energy and excitement during her too-few scenes on camera.

Despite beautiful shots of the Welsh countryside and impressive performances by Grant, Fitzgerald and Meany, "The Englishman..." drags on much too long, making it a "mountain out of a molehill" movie that would have been better served as a one hour "Masterpiece Theater" television production.
